

LITERARY NOTES.

Mr. Justin McCarthy's pet adjective is "strenuous." He uses it most liberally in painting the portraits of Lord Palmerston and Thomas Carlyle.

The retail price of Scribner's Monthly in England has been advanced from 1s. (about 25 cents) to 1s. and 4d., which approximates closely to the home price.

In a recent Welsh essay advocating that the Cymric language be maintained as a means of strengthening the Welsh nationality, it was said: "The Welsh is undergoing changes which Englishmen can notice while listening to Welsh speeches and sermons, but there are Welsh words which corroborate so little of an alien tongue that their presence is not one who has not acquired a thorough knowledge of Welsh can understand what they are speaking about."

A famous Greek novel called "Louki Laras" will soon be an open book to English readers. M. Gennadius, late Greek Charge d'Affaires in London, is making the translation, and it has already been published in the principal Continental languages. The time of the story is during the Greek War of Independence, and it takes the form of reminiscences of a Scotoe merchant popular in the story in Greece that it is used as a class book in the higher Greek schools.

Miss Clarkson, of Baltimore, has made several bright holiday books for children, and white she is principally known as an artist, she has sometimes illustrated her own verse. This season she has attempted something more ambitious—a folio gift holiday book called "Indian Summer" (E. P. Dutton & Co.). It contains poems selected from the American poets and several of her own, and sixteen chrome-lithographs of autumn leaves and downes after her own designs.

Readers of the present day have been roundly abused for their supposed neglect of the standard English essayists and the aesthetic branch of "polite literature" by bygone days. The fact that the Mercatello Library has some eight or ten copies of Burke's "Treatise on the Sublime and the Beautiful," and that every copy is "out" and in good demand, would speak well for the taste of readers in general, if it were not also a fact that the artists and art students of the city give no rest to every important book relating to art in the public libraries.

Mr. Laurence Oliphant's new book, "The Land of Gilead," is nearly ready in London. The Jewish Chronicle says it will advocate a beginning of the "reparation" of the Jews, by the settlement under the auspices of a land company, of a considerable number of Jews from Eastern Europe and Asia, in an agricultural colony situated in the territory which formerly belonged to the tribes of Benjamin and Gad. Mr. Oliphant had travelled in Turkey in 1855, 1860 and 1862; but last year he left England in February for Syria, with the special object of securing the local knowledge which his previous experience in colonization showed him to be necessary. It is the result of these recent travels that he will write "The Land of Gilead." A hundred Roman families have agreed to settle in Palestine, but they are too poor to pay more than half the expense, and wish to borrow the other half.

The subscription volumes of "The Complete Works of Rembrandt," with description and notes by the famous French writer, Charles Blanc, have just been received by J. W. Bouton. It is one of the most important art publications ever made. It includes 356 reproductions in fac-simile, by a new process, of all the known etchings of Rembrandt, being the first and only complete collection. The edition was limited to 500 copies. Of these, 400 copies, 3 volumes each, are sold at $150 a set; 80 copies, 4 volumes each, are sold at $300 a set, and 20 copies, 5 volumes each, letter press on Wm. C. Tappan paper, and three sets of plates on Holland, Japanese, and Wm. C. Tappan paper, are sold at $600 a set. The subscription price is $10,000. Charles Blanc, in speaking of the process by which the plates were reproduced, says: "We have compared these fac-similes with the originals, and can affirm that they reproduce the original print with great precision."

Mr. Wendell Phillips has started another reform movement and seems by coexisting American scholars and editors (as principals) of a great error, or, as he puts it, of insuring a foreign tongue. His resonance appears in the Editor's Easy Chair of "Harper's Magazine" for December. In part it is as follows:
